Welcome

Welcome to the National Geographic Learning English Language Teaching Catalogue 2019

There is no doubt that the world of teaching and education is fast-paced and demanding. What we all crave is a little more time. And yet our youngest students seem to make time to enjoy the fascinating world they are discovering around them. There is a sense of wonder and curiosity in young learners that we are keen to capitalize on as educators. Our new young learner series does just this – by appealing to students' innate willingness to stop, look, discover and make connections. And that's why we've called the series Look. Find out more on page 22.

The increasing demands on our time and headspace as we get older seem to squeeze out a lot of that childhood ability to stop and appreciate what an amazing world we live in. What you will find from all National Geographic Learning materials is an invitation to you and your students to revisit that sense of discovery and to spend some of that precious time bringing the world into the classroom, and the classroom to life.

Global Citizenship and 21st Century Learning

There are certain key themes that have emerged in the ELT industry over the past years: the advance of digital in our classrooms and in our teaching, and the pressing need to develop the whole learner. What does this mean exactly? It means helping students become curious, rounded, well-informed global citizens to allow them to work, live and enjoy the modern world. That is the world of the 21st century, and the skills that have emerged as being critical to success within that world need to be addressed across education.

Our partnership with National Geographic Society puts us in the privileged position of being able to provide our students (and teachers) with truly global material that lends itself to developing those 21st century skills – such as critical thinking and digital and visual literacy. It also undoubtedly inspires learners to be more intellectually curious, culturally aware and responsible members of our global society. In addition, our recent and concurrent partnership with TED Talks progresses this mission further – giving our materials an aspirational and motivational edge that you won't find elsewhere.

For English that truly develops skills for the 21st century you need to look no further than National Geographic Learning.

National Geographic Learning helps you to bring the power of ideas into your classroom with our learning materials with TED Talks.

Within carefully-developed curricula that include real-world stories, video, and photographs from National Geographic, the inspiring ideas introduced in our learning materials with TED Talks motivate learners to express themselves thoughtfully and confidently in English.

Our learning materials provide:

- Carefully selected TED Talks that focus on ideas that learners of English want to talk about
- Scaffolded language lessons that help learners understand and talk about ideas in English
- Fully supported materials that make it easy to use TED Talks in any English language classroom.

The lake contains borax islands, whose white colour contrasts with the reddish colour of its waters, which is caused by red sediments and pigmentation of some algae.

Spotlight on First and Spotlight on Advanced

Spotlight on Advanced: Francesca Mansfield, Carol Nuttall and Language Testing 123

UPPER INTERMEDIATE AND ADVANCED

CEFR B2 AND C1 | 2 LEVELS

The Spotlight Series for First and Advanced is a fully comprehensive course that has been revised to be in line with the new Cambridge English exam specifications for January 2015. It prepares adults and younger learners to excel in the revised exam.

An exciting new feature of the revised edition is the Ideas Generator. Test takers need to generate ideas to pass the Speaking and Writing papers of the exam. The Ideas Generator uses National Geographic videos to stimulate students' interest in common exam topics, helps them build ideas about these topics and gathers the language they need to effectively write or speak about them. After each video lesson students will have a bank of ideas, functional language and vocabulary tied to eight topics that commonly appear in the exam.

One of the most difficult parts of the exam for students is the Speaking Test. The Speaking Test videos and worksheets prepare students to deal with this challenge by getting them to engage with simulations of all four parts of the Speaking Test.

The Piscataqua River is a 12-mile-long (19 km) tidal river forming the boundary of the U.S. states of New Hampshire and Maine. Named by the area's original Abenaki inhabitants, Piscataqua is believed to be a combination of peske (branch) with tegwe (a river with a strong current, possibly tidal).

Critical Thinking in ELT

Paul Dummett, John Hughes

Through accessible examples from their own experiences in the classroom, Paul Dummett and John Hughes provide English language teachers with practical ways to incorporate critical thinking into every class. Dummett and Hughes define critical thinking for English language teaching and demonstrate how challenging learners at all levels to think both critically and creatively develops learner autonomy, increases learner motivation, and promotes authentic communication.

“I believe this text, with its effective (and appropriate) balance of theory and practice, could be incorporated into teacher-training programs for both undergraduate and graduate students... (it) should be an essential read for ESL/EFL materials and textbook designers.”

- Sharon Cavusgil, Senior Lecturer, Department of Applied Linguistics & ESL, Georgia State University
